Iowa Governor Kim Reynolds has a new way to help Iowans get tested for the coronavirus for free. The new process works in three steps:

1. Answer some questions online about yourself and your health at this website <https://www.testiowa.com/>. The questions are available in English and Spanish.
2. If testing is needed, you will be scheduled for a free drive-through test. You will receive the date, time, location, and instructions.
3. If you test positive for the virus, you will answer more questions to help prevent spreading the virus. You may be asked where you have traveled recently and who you have been in contact with.
